The Editor Comments

Summer quarter has once again arrived at Eastern and with it that characteristic calm that seems to descend on the campus in June, July, and August.

It is a good time, with the grounds resplendent in newly leaved trees, bushes and shrubs and freshly planted flowers.

It is an important time too; a time of renewal. Students leave campus to find "financial renewal" in summer jobs and "renewal of the spirit" in summer relaxation. Professors strengthen and renew their professionalism with advanced study and research grants. Alumni return to campus to renew and increase their knowledge through summer school and special programs.

This year, perhaps more than most, it is a reflective time. As Eastern approaches the eve of its Diamond Jubilee Celebration the summer offers pause to think about those years gone by, in the days of Mr. Lord, Dr. Buzzard and Dr. Doudna, and the great strides our school has made under their guidance. The summer extends too an opportunity to reflect on what Eastern's future can be under Dr. Fite, and those who will follow him, and how alumni, staff, and students can work together to make it an even better place of learning.

We on the staff of the Alumnus feel that the summer is a time which gives all those connected with Eastern a chance to give full meaning to the Diamond Jubilee motto: 75 Years: An Excellent Yesterday—A Challenging Tomorrow.

Business School Names Distinguished Alumnus

Author E. Hughes, an Eastern Illinois University graduate and now President of the University of San Diego, California was honored Tuesday evening, May 1st by Eastern's School of Business.

Hughes, a native of Hoopeston, Illinois, received the School's Distinguished Alumnus Award at the annual School of Business awards dinner. The fourth recipient of the award, Hughes was selected from the approximately 3,500 former business students who have graduated from the School since it began as a "Commerce Department" in 1937.

Hughes received the B. S. in Education degree in 1951. Following graduation he taught in high schools at Allerton Park, Illinois; Manitou Springs and Colorado Springs, Colorado.

In 1954 he received the M.S. in Education degree from Northern Colorado University, Greeley, Colorado. He taught at Eastern from 1956 to 1958 and earned the Ph.D. degree at the State University of Iowa in 1960.

During 1960-61 Hughes was member of the staff at Shippensburg State College Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, and the next ten years were spent at Northern Arizona State University where he served as faculty member of the School of Business for four years, Dean of the School four years, then Vice President and Provost of the University for two years.

In 1971 he was appointed President of the University of San Diego, a Catholic university founded in 1949. After assuming the Presidency, Hughes undertook a program of reorganization so that, from its original separate colleges for men, for women, and for law, it now is a coeducational institution with a college of Arts and Science, School of

Dale W. Johnson, '43: Businessman, Builder

Dale W. Johnson, '43, left Eastern's campus some thirty years ago for a commission as an officer in the Navy and service in World War II. Today, Johnson is a highly successful Florida businessman, real estate broker, and contractor whose latest project is for the development of a multi-million dollar condominium complex in the Dade County area. The project, which is still under construction, will see some 70 buildings located on 35 acres of land along U.S. highway 1.

A native of Shelby County Illinois, Johnson grew up on a farm between Neoga and Stewardson. After graduation from Eastern with a degree in business, he went to Columbia University in New York where he was commissioned an ensign in 1943. During the war years Johnson saw duty in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

After his release from service in

Dale W. Johnson

1946, Johnson became director of the Veterans Service Center in New Britain, Connecticut. Here he assisted returning veterans in furthering their education and in finding jobs and houses.

In Connecticut Johnson became involved in real estate and headed several holding and development firms. Though highly successful, Johnson still found time to participate in civic affairs. He served on the New Britain mayor's housing committee where he helped to coordinate the building of several hundred pre-fabricated homes for veterans and their families. Later he was president of the Chamber of Commerce in Berlin, Connecticut.

In 1969 Johnson and his family moved to Key Biscayne, Florida where he continued his real estate and contracting interests by becoming involved in various land projects in the Miami area. Here he and an

Dr. Allyn Cook

Trips to Europe, teaching in Cairo, research in South America, travel to Hawaii—these are all a part of the life and work of Dr. Allyn Cook, '48, and his wife Carolyn and two daughters Cheryl and Jackie.

Dr. Cook is a plant pathologist, an expert in that part of the science of Botany which specializes in the diagnosis, prevention, treatment and cure of plant diseases. Employed by the Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences of the University of Florida, Dr. Cook's primary area of interest is diseases of tropical plants.

Dr. Cook's career really began when he returned to Eastern in 1946 after military service during World War II. Because of a shortage of student housing after the war, Cook lived with Dr. Harold Cavins and his family. Dr. Cavins, who was then

Raymond Plath

"The great challenge to me is to make students aware that what they are studying is all around them; to show them that economics is not confined to a book or a class room but that it's all around—in everyday life." That's the way Raymond Plath, professor of Economics, described his job of teaching the "uncertain science" to EIU students.

Relaxing in the quiet of his Coleman Hall office, surrounded by books on economics, Plath talked about his past and the teaching philosophy that has guided him throughout the 30 years of his career in higher education.

A native of Milwaukee, Plath received his undergraduate and graduate degree from the University of Wisconsin. His first teaching experience was gained as a high school social studies teacher in the public schools of Beloit Wisconsin. After teaching in the Chicago junior colleges and at Louisiana State University, Plath joined the Eastern faculty in 1946. "Dr. Buzzard hired me sight unseen, over the telephone," related Plath. "I was on the verge of taking a job at Memphis State when Dr. Buzzard called. I'm glad he did."

When Plath came to Eastern, he was only the fifth person to make up

"Research helps keep a Professor alive; It provides a nourishment that keeps him interesting."

what was then called the Social Science Department, composed of history, economics/anthropology and political science. "I taught economics and history," said Plath. "The economics classes of those days consisted of one principles course and no advanced classes at all. Some junior colleges today have broader social studies programs than we had then," he reminisced. Today Eastern's Department of Economics has eleven instructors and offers 16 courses ranging from a basic principles course to advanced classes in collective bargaining and government and labor.

One element of permanence in a continuum of change however is Plath's dedication to teaching. "A major goal of mine is to call the students' attention to the fact that when they read a newspaper or see a newstory on television, they are seeing economics in action. The world is the laboratory of economics, and if kids can relate econ to current problems of society, such as inflation, taxes, pollution and waste, they can better deal with these problems in life." Economics, according to Plath, goes far beyond a "dollars and cents concept", and becomes intimately involved in societal problems. This is evident, said Plath, when the social significance of some economics practices such as the income tax, social security, and welfare programs is examined. Plath feels if students understand these they will be better informed citizens of the world in which they must live.

How is this accomplished? "I try to relate subject matter of the course to events of the day," Plath explained, "and in my exams I cite a familiar condition and call upon the students to recognize it as economic theory."

When asked if he felt research and writing has a role at Eastern, Plath replied "I don't believe that research should be discouraged here, and I don't feel there is any conflict between research and good teaching. In fact, research makes for better teaching. If it doesn't, its value is diminished. Some of the most stimulating professors I had at the University of Wisconsin were outstanding research scholars. Research helps keep a professor alive, it provides a nourishment that keeps him interesting." Continuing, Plath, amplified his viewpoint: "Equally as important as research, however, is constant study. A teacher must be a continuous student of his subject. The econ professor should have as one of his ideals keeping current by reading books, newspapers, magazines or any other source of information. You can't teach the econ of ten or 20 years ago today."

Plath, who is currently Chairman of the Social Studies Division, teaches basic economics courses and advanced classes in European economic history and money and banking. He and his wife Glendora, who teaches at Charleston High School, live at 3 Orchard Drive in Charleston.

Mary Atchison

Badminton, archery, tennis, and bowling to most of us are games and pastimes to fill our leisure hours. To Mrs. Mary Atchison, however they are a part of a full day's work every day.

A member of Eastern's Womens Physical Education Department, Mrs. Atchison teaches these activities and several others to many men and women throughout the course of a year. It's an important job. "We use physical exercise of some kind every day in our lives," Mrs. Atchison explained, "but oftentimes these usual activities aren't enough. In the world in which most of us live, we need additional activity, and really we need some escape too. Hopefully the activities we teach here will provide those things by having carry over value after college is left behind. These sports are something nearly all women can use in the future, in life."

Service courses requirements were eliminated last year at Eastern, and although enrollment in physical education has seen a slight dip, Mrs. Atchison still finds wide interest in the subject among women attending EIU. "It's something they really want to learn," she pointed out, "and besides, they enjoy it."

When questioned about what she hoped her students would gain from her classes, Mrs. Atchison was definite in her reply: "I want them to have an understanding of the activity, and an average degree of skill that would enable them to participate in it in the future as a meaningful recreation. If the student is a physical education major, however, she should enhance an already existing skill, and she should learn more about the sport—its details, so that she can correct errors and be able to evaluate the performance of others."

A native of Farina, Illinois, Mrs. Atchison received her bachelors degree from Southern Illinois University and holds a masters degree from Eastern.

She worked temporarily for Eastern in 1968, and then became a regular member of the Womens Physical Education Department in 1969. In addition to teaching activity classes such as tennis, bowling, badminton, and archery, she is sponsor for Eastern's intercollegiate womens soft ball team. The team is a group of 23 women who participate in a 14 week long schedule of soft ball competition with other colleges and universities in the area.

The mother of a five year old, Mrs. Atchison manages to be a homemaker as well as teach full time at Eastern. In addition she is enrolled in graduate work at Indiana University. "It isn't easy," she laughed, "but I enjoy it." She and her husband Terry, an associate farm advisor for Coles County, and son Michael, reside at 925 Polk in Charleston.

William Clark

Seven years ago Bill Clark was a bus boy in Eastern's Martin Luther King University Union snack bar. Today he is Director of Student Activities and Organizations, a University administrator responsible for advising and assisting student organizations and groups on Eastern's campus.

The position Clark holds is only a few years old, having been created in 1969. Working with students however is nothing new for Clark and he has been associated with them and the University in various capacities for the past ten years.

Clark entered Eastern as a student in 1963, and in 1965 he was employed as a bus boy in the snack bar. A short time later he became an evening supervisor there, and in 1966 he was made full time manager.

After serving as food administrator in 1967 Clark was appointed assistant director of the University Union in 1968. In the fall of 1972 he assumed his present duties.

and articulate, explained his work. "My prime function is to advise three main student groups— the student government, the Greek organizations, and the University Board, a student administrative group which handles all campus activities such as concerts, lectures and Homecoming." Expanding his explanation, Clark pointed out that his job was educational as well as administrative. "I try to facilitate the educational experiences students have when they participate in out of class activities. The growing up experiences can't be taught in the class room, but they happen in student activities. I think it's in these activities that students learn some of the social skills they will use in adult life."

Over the past decade student involvement in University affairs has grown tremendously, and Clark sees this as a healthy development. "My present feeling is that students are like any other rational adults. When given proper information their decisions are as good as those of any other adult." Not only are the students educated by this process, says Clark, but the University benefits as well. "I think that student participation on University councils and committees broadens the outlook of those committees, and they get actual student input, not supposed student input. I think that's important."

Responsibility for their actions, however, Clark stressed, must remain with the students. "It's up to the student government to come up with qualified, competent people to fill these leadership roles," he explained.

Clark, 28, is a man happy with his job. "My work is exciting," he said, "There's no boredom in it. These kids have boundless energy, and I really enjoy seeing them learning from their experiences. I enjoy seeing them mature through those experiences, and I enjoy seeing them successful in projects they undertake."

Clark, who earned a masters degree from Eastern in 1971, and his wife Joy, a teacher, have two children and reside in Charleston.

TKE Plans Festivities

Tau Kappa Epsilon, Gamma Omega chapter, will hold its 21st annual Homecoming again this fall, according to Ron Bangert, Alumni Director for TKE.

Featured events for the festivities, which will be held on Homecoming weekend October 27 and 28, include an open house at the new fraternity house all day long Saturday, the 27th, a dance Saturday evening at the Charleston Elks Club, and coffee, sandwiches and donuts at noon on Sunday.

Bangert welcomes all TKE alumni back. "We're planning on having one heck of a good time, even better than last year's Homecoming," he said. "Last year we had some 200 people here, including alums and their wives. This year we hope that double the number will come to join the fun." Bangert encourages all TKE alumni to contact several of their fraternity brothers in order to increase attendance as much as possible.

The new TKE house is located at 1429 Seventh Street.

Dean of Men, was Cook's landlord for the next three years.

"Part time jobs at the cafeteria and as a student helper for Dr. Ziegler along with a full course load kept me busy," related Dr. Cook, "but there was time for some memorable card games with the Cavins."

After graduation from Eastern in 1948, Cook and his wife (Carolyn Shores, '47) moved to Madison, Wisconsin where he enrolled as a graduate assistant in plant pathology.

"Our three years in Madison slipped quickly by because of long hours, hard work and the added responsibility of two daughters," Cook noted. "When our second daughter was six weeks old we went to Brookings, South Dakota, where I was to be assistant professor of plant pathology." Two years later the young family moved to Florida where Dr. Cook was employed by the Department of Agriculture. In 1956 he joined the faculty of the University of Florida as an assistant professor of research in the plant pathology department.

Upon joining the Florida faculty Dr. Cook became involved in identifying and controlling virus diseases of peppers, a project of vast economic significance since Florida produces about one third of all peppers grown in the United States. Due to his progress in this undertaking, Dr. Cook was asked to speak at the International Horticultural Congress in Brussels in 1962.

Because of his interest in viral diseases of plants, Dr. Cook applied for and received a lectureship to Ein Shams University in Cairo, Egypt. "All the American community in Cairo benefited from the bi-weekly lectures and tours conducted by Bernard Bothmer, Curator of Egyptian Art for the Brooklyn Museum, who was in Cairo during our stay there," commented Dr. Cook. "Leaving Cairo was a heart rending experience for all of us but we still maintain contact with some colleagues from this experience."

After his return to the University of Florida, Dr. Cook traveled frequently to several nations in Central and South America and the Caribbean in connection with his research and teaching duties concerning diseases of tropical plants.

In 1970-71 the Cooks again went abroad, this time for a sabbatical leave at the University of Hawaii. During the family's months in Hawaii, Dr. Cook again was able to travel, this time to Wageningen, Holland to the Third International Conference on Plant Pathogenic Bacteria, and to the coffee rust research laboratory just outside Lisbon, Portugal.

The Cooks returned to Florida in 1971, but their travels weren't over. In 1972 the family spent three weeks in Mexico where Dr. Cook attended the American Phytopathological Society meeting in Mexico City. Most of the time there was spent as a family camping trip.

It has been an exciting and fulfilling life for Dr. Allyn Cook and his family since his graduation twenty five years ago, but there are still thoughts of days in Charleston. "Both Carolyn and I have fond memories of Eastern during the mid- (Continued on page 20)

The Eastern track team proved it was the strongest in the schools history with a third place finish in the NCAA College Division national track and field championships in early June.

The Panthers scored 43 points finishing behind winner Norfolk State, 54, and Lincoln (Mo.) University with 48. Earlier this season Eastern finished ahead of Lincoln in the Eastern relays.

Rod Jackson again demonstrated his All-American ranking by winning the 440-yard intermediate hurdles in 51 seconds. It was the second straight year he has won this event. He also finished third in the 120-yard high hurdles in 14 seconds flat.

Jackson, from Jacksonville, will represent Eastern in the University Division nationals later this month. Sandy Osei-Agyeman, the Ghana sprinter, was third in the 100-yard dash in 9.4 seconds. He pulled a hamstring muscle in the semifinals of the 220-yard dash which forced him out of the meet, and probably kept Eastern from taking second place. He would have advanced to the UD for his performance in the 100-yard dash.

Jackson and Osei-Agyeman teamed with Darrell Brown and Vic Brooks took third in the 440-yard relay in 41 seconds. This qualified them for the UD finals but with Osei-Agyeman injured, the Panthers will be ineligible to compete.

BASEBALL

The Panther baseball team compiled its greatest season in the history of Eastern this spring as it captured third place in the NCAA college Division World Series.

Coach Bill McCabe stated prior to the start of the season that the Panthers would go as far as the pitching would carry them. The results, a 27-13 record, is also the most wins in Eastern history.

Eastern ended the regular season with a record of 21-11, which earned a bid to the post-season playoffs. Entering the Mideast Regional, the unranked Panthers were an underdog to No. 2 ranked SIU-Edwardsville. However, Eastern swept to four straight victories over Indiana Central, 7-6, Cleveland State, 6-2, SIU-Edwardsville, 9-8, and Marietta College, 7-2, to handily win the regional.

In the World Series at Springfield, Ill., Eastern was pitted against two-time defending champ and No. 3 ranked Florida Southern in the opening game of the six-team double elimination tourney.

The Panthers routed the Moccasins star righthander Jay Smith 9-1. Next up was No. 1 ranked California-Irvine which used a six-run inning to stop Eastern, 6-2.

With their backs to the wall, the Panthers came right back to defeat Missouri-St. Louis, 7-5. Only one of three teams left, Eastern lost the right to play in the finals when Ithaca stopped them 3-2. The Panthers finished as the number seventh ranked team in the country.
